₹21 crore recovered as Rohtak civic body tightens noose on property tax defaulters

RAVINDER SAINI

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

ROHTAK, JANUARY 6

With less than three months left before the close of the current financial year, the Rohtak Municipal Corporation (MC) has stepped up its property tax recovery drive. It has already collected over 75 per cent of its annual target. Against a target of Rs 28 crore, the civic body has so far recovered Rs 21.07 crore and expects to maximise collections by March 31.

Significantly, the amount recovered this year is nearly double that of the previous financial year (2024-25), when the MC collected Rs 11.84 crore in property tax. Officials attribute the sharp increase to strict enforcement measures, including issuance of notices and sealing of properties belonging to major defaulters.

According to official figures, Rohtak MC has 2,204 properties, of which 3,707 are in default, with total pending dues of Rs 5.31 crore. Most of the defaulters are owners of commercial properties such as hotels, banquet halls, restaurants, shopping

"As part of the intensified drive, the MC has recently issued notices to 661 defaulters with outstanding property tax dues of more than Rs one lakh each. They have been warned to clear their dues immediately or face sealing action. The notices mark the beginning of a stricter phase of recovery, and more defaulters will be brought under its ambit in the coming days," said an official.

During the current financial year, the MC has already sealed 57 properties of major defaulters. Of these, 30 property owners subsequently deposited over Rs 1.38 crore, leading to de-sealing of their premises. However, 27 properties remain sealed due to continued non-payment of dues.

Meanwhile, Dr Anand Kumar Sharma, Commissioner, Rohtak MC, appealed to the property owners to clear their outstanding dues without delay to avoid sealing action. He said property tax was a crucial source of revenue used for development works, including sanitation and civic infrastructure.

"Non-payment of property tax directly hampers development in municipal areas. Initially, action has been taken against major defaulters, but eventually all defaulters will be served notices for recovery," Sharma added.

Crackdown on illegal plastic waste dumping in Bahadurgarh, 3 sites sealed

BAHADURGARH, JANUARY 6

Taking strict action against illegal plastic waste dumping, the district administration has sealed three dumping sites and impounded four vehicles at Chhotu Ram Nagar in Bahadurgarh town here on Monday. The action was carried out during an evening inspection drive led by Bahadurgarh SDM Abhinav Swachh, accompanied by officials from departments concerned.

The drive was conducted in view of the ban on unauthorised transportation, dumping and storage of plastic waste in the city. The inspection team, comprising officials from the police, Regional Transport Authority and the Bahadurgarh Municipal Council, inspected vacant plots at Chhotu Ram Nagar where pollution-causing activities were reportedly underway.

During the inspection, it was found that plastic waste was being illegally dumped in several plots in violation of prescribed norms. Acting on the spot, the SDM directed officials to seal three such plots and impound four vehicles that were being used for dumping plastic waste.

Sources claimed that the plastic waste was brought here from other places only for the purpose of storage and later it was sold to illegal units located in nearby area, which reprocessed these. Moreover, the waste sometimes also catches fire, causing serious environmental hazards.

Swachh said the District Magistrate had imposed restrictions on the illegal movement, dumping and storage of plastic waste under Section 163 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita, 2023. Under these orders, illegal dumping or loading of plastic waste at any location was strictly prohibited.

He added that dumping plastic waste at unauthorised sites in the Bahadurgarh area promoted pollution and posed a serious threat to public health, quality of life and public peace. Preventive action against such activities was necessary in the larger public interest.

The SDM made it clear that such illegal units would not be allowed to operate in Bahadurgarh. Any person found violating the rules would face strict punitive action under various provisions of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita.

Appealing to the public, Swachh urged citizens not to engage in illegal activities that increased environmental pollution and endangered public life. He emphasised that ensuring a clean, safe and pollution-free environment was the priority of the administration and required cooperation from all sections of society.

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

ROHTAK, JANUARY 6

In view of the cold wave warning issued by the Meteorological Department, the district administration has issued a comprehensive advisory aimed at minimising loss of life, health risks and economic damage during cold wave conditions.

Deputy Commissioner Sachin Gupta has urged citizens to remain vigilant, strictly follow the advisory and extend help to vulnerable sections, including the elderly, children and those living alone.

He advised residents to keep themselves updated about weather conditions through radio, television and newspapers. In case of symptoms such as cold, fever, nose bleeding or excessive shivering, people should seek medical advice immediately. Unnecessary travel during severe cold conditions should be avoided, while staying indoors, keeping dry and consuming warm fluids has been recommended. He cautioned against lighting coal or fire stoves in closed rooms due to the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Highlighting the importance of nutrition, Gupta said people should consume vitamin C-rich fruits and vegetables to maintain immunity and body temperature. He also stressed that heads, necks, hands and feet should be properly covered. In case of hypothermia symptoms such as numbness, drop in body temperature or extreme shivering, immediate medical assistance should be sought.

The advisory also focuses on safeguarding agriculture during cold-wave conditions. The farmers have been advised to carry out light and frequent irrigation, preferably through sprinklers, to protect crops. Nurseries and plants should be covered with plastic sheets or straw, and unnecessary ploughing should be avoided. Organic mulching and windbreaks have been recommended to reduce crop damage. The Deputy Commissioner warned that cold wave and frost could lead to diseases such as rust and late blight, affecting crop yield and storage.

Regarding livestock care, Gupta said animals should be provided with fat-rich supplements and concentrated feed. The livestock should be protected from cold winds, especially at night, and not left in the open. Poultry farmers have been advised to keep chicks warm in sheds and use dry bedding such as straw. Pet animals and domestic livestock should also be sheltered indoors to protect them from extreme cold.

A team of Municipal Corporation inspects a hotel in Yamunanagar.

Communication (IEC) Expert Akash Kumar and Durgesh Kumar found that many bulk waste producers were not collecting wet and dry waste separately.

The team found that some establishments didn't have on-site composting facilities and others didn't display information boards related to waste management.

Besides, deficiencies were also found in maintaining necessary records related to waste disposal. Sanitation Inspector Sushil Sharma said the management of the establishments were told that bulk waste producers were required to compost the wet waste of their establishments.

He also said that segregation of waste, the establishment of a composting unit, the installation of information boards and regular record keeping were mandatory requirements under the regulations.

"Failure to comply with these regulations will result in fines and legal action by the Municipal Corporation," said Sushil Sharma.

IEC expert Akash Kumar said the role of bulk waste generators was crucial in the swachh survey.

"Hotels, hospitals and educational institutions generate large amounts of waste daily. Therefore, if these institutions comply with the regulations, the sanitation system of the twin cities can be significantly improved," said Akash Kumar.

He appealed to the operators of the establishments to voluntarily comply with regulations and cooperate with the MCYJ Sanitation Inspector Sushil Sharma further said this campaign would not be limited to warnings.

He said further inspections would be conducted in the coming days and legal action would be taken against bulk waste producers, who ignored the regulations, along with fines.

"This campaign of the MCYJ will continue in future also to ensure that the twin cities become clean, beautiful and environmentally friendly," said Sushil Sharma.

The delegation, led jointly by Youth JJP-in-charge Shantanu Godara and District Youth President Rajendra Suthar, raised concerns over transparency, fairness and credibility of the HTET results. They highlighted that after the results were initially prepared, they were suddenly recalled, and the reasons behind this move have not been made public.

Karnal steps up drive to achieve top rank in Swachh Survekshan

PARVEEN ARORA

KARNAL, JANUARY 6

With an aim to secure the top rank in Swachh Survekshan 2025-26 and to improve the performance of municipal bodies across the district and also five adopted MCs of the state, the Karnal Municipal Corporation (KMC) has intensified its efforts. It has focused on capacity-building in all the MCs.

Karnal city got third rank in the country in the 'Swachh Shehar' category (population 50,000-3 lakh) in Swachh Survekshan 2024-25, emerging as Haryana's first city to receive the award from President of India Droupadi Murmu. Karnal scored an impressive 11,067 out of 12,500, earned a 3-star Garbage-Free City rating, and achieved Water Plus status. Earlier, Karnal had ranked 115th in 2023. After this achievement, on the call of the Union Minister Manohar Lal Khattar an initiative Swachh Shehar Jodi (SSJ) was started, under which Karnal was assigned mentoring five smaller municipal bodies—Siwan, Imaillabad, Narnaud, Kalarauli and Rajound, turning the city from a performer into a mentor on urban hygiene.

Apart from these adopted MCs, the KMC focuses on Indri, Tharori, Nissing, Ausandh, Gharunda and Nilokheri MCs of the district. The KMC is making efforts with the help of these MCs to improve their rankings.

Mayor Renu Bala Gupta has already visited all five adopted MCs, exhorting these to make efforts to achieve the goal of improving the ranking by ensuring cleanliness.

"I have already visited these MCs and recently I have held a meeting with the officials of KMC and other MCs. Our focus is on capacity building in all MC," said Renu Bala Gupta.

She emphasised the officials and employees will ensure proper cleanliness in their MCs, for which directions had been issued and duties assigned.

All MCs have been asked to upload the progress report of cleanliness on the portal on a daily basis, which will be reviewed, she added.

The Mayor said a training programme had already been organised to train staff members on filling and updating details on the MIS portal. They have also been made aware about the Swachh Survekshan toolkit and key evaluation parameters, including Information, Education and Communication (IEC) activities, citizen and student awareness programmes, installation of creative structures under the waste to wonder initiative, establishment of reduce, reuse and recycle (RRR) centres, door-to-door waste segregation, regular cleanliness drives, city beautification, Safai Mitra Samman Abhiyan and distribution of Safai Mitra kits, she added.

Dr Vaishali Sharma, Commissioner, KMC, said they were well prepared for the Swachh Survekshan 2025-26. They had constituted teams for public outreach to make people aware about segregation of waste, cleanliness in their vicinity and other aspects. Health sanitary inspectors, motivators along with others are spreading awareness while visiting door to door as well as commercial spaces.

She said their door-to-door waste collection teams were working with dedication. "Night sweeping is being done by the KMC employees," she said.

Additional Municipal Commissioner (AMC), Ashok Kumar said the officials of the adopted MCs as well as the MCs of the district had been directed to strengthen sanitation standards, streamline waste management systems and ensure excellent performance in the survey.

Why Karnal civic body has banned mobile phone use during office hours

EXPLAINER KARNAL

PARVEEN ARORA

KARNAL Municipal Corporation (KMC) Commissioner Vaishali Sharma has imposed a ban on the unnecessary use of mobile phones during office hours. The order prohibits employees from using mobile phones for non-official purposes while at work. Here is what you need to know about the order, its impact and reaction of the employees.

What prompted the Commissioner to take this step?

As per officials, the decision was taken after repeated observations that many employees remained engaged with their mobile phones during working hours. They noticed that the employees were busy scrolling through phones instead of attending to official duties. Time was being wasted on social media platforms such as Instagram reels and other non-work-related content. This not only disrupted workflow but also affected the pace and quality of public service delivery. Besides, it caused delays in official work and inconvenience to the general public. The order prohibits employees from using mobile phones for non-official purposes while at work. The move is aimed at improving work efficiency, strengthening office discipline and ensuring better public service delivery.

How will the ban be implemented on the ground?

As per the instructions, employees, except those exempted, will be required to deposit their mobile phones with their respective branch heads during office hours. For communication purposes, staff members have been instructed to use landline phones, whether for official or personal calls. The officials have also underlined that the step will help maintain official secrecy and reduce unne-sary distractions at the workplace.

Are there any exemptions to the ban?

The administration has granted exemptions to some employees, including branch heads, personal assistants, and staff working at the portal. These employees require mobile phones mainly for OTP authentication and portal-related work. Officials involved directly in digital and portal-based operations have also been exempted.

What happens if the employees violate the order?

The authorities made it clear that strict compliance was mandatory. Any violation of the instructions will invite disciplinary action against the employee concerned. The administration believes that the firm enforcement was necessary to ensure the effectiveness of the decision. At present, the implementation is in its initial phase and the authorities are observing the positive and negative impact of the order as a couple of MCs highlighted that earlier their works were done on phone, but now they have to visit the office for the works of the general public. However, some of the employees are happy with the decision, saying their mobile numbers have become common and the general public, MCs and politicians kept calling them, due to which their work was hampered.

Has such a ban been imposed earlier in Karnal?

A similar restriction was earlier enforced at the Deputy Commissioner's office at the Mini Secretariat, where employees across various branches were prohibited from using mobile phones during office hours. This ban was imposed by DC Uttam Singh. Employees were required to deposit phones with the City Magistrate's office or respective unit heads. That order followed a previous directive enforcing a formal dress code, banning jeans and making trousers and shirts mandatory.

Is this ban contradictory to the government's digital push?

This is one of the key concerns raised by the employees. Some staff members argue that the ban contradicts the government's emphasis on digital governance. They point out that many branches rely heavily on OTP and mobile communication for quick sharing of reports, replies and official correspondence. They say restricting mobile use could slow down internal coordination and operational efficiency.

What is the reaction of the employee associations?

The move has drawn criticism from employee unions. They termed the ban an "attack on the freedom of employees" and demanded that it be withdrawn. They say mobile phones are now an essential tool in administrative functioning and cannot be completely separated from office work.

TIME CAPSULE

CHARLIE HEBDO'S PARIS OFFICES ATTACKED (JAN 7, 2015)

Testing freedom of expression

ON January 7, 2015, two gunmen stormed French satirical weekly Charlie Hebdo's Paris offices, killing 12 persons, including eight journalists and cartoonists. The attackers, brothers Chérif and Saïd Kouachi, targeted the satirical magazine for publishing cartoons depicting Prophet Muhammad—a practice the publication had maintained despite years of death threats.

Shouting "We have avenged the Prophet", they escaped but were killed two days later while a third attacker murdered four more hostages at a supermarket.

Al-Qaeda had explicitly listed the magazine's editor in a 2013 death list for insulting Islam. The violence, thus, represented ideological extremism's attempt to silence perceived religious mockery through lethal force.

Over 1.5 million Parisians marched in solidarity, with #JeSuisCharlie trending globally as supporters framed the killings as an assault on democratic values. Yet Muslim leaders protested that freedom of expression does not extend to religious 'mockery'.

When Charlie Hebdo republished Muhammad cartoons, violent protests erupted across West Asia, North Africa and South Asia.

The debate this incident stirred centred on whether freedom of expression is absolute. John Stuart Mill's utilitarian defence provides the strongest intellectual foundation for protecting Hebdo's cartoons. Mill argues that silencing any opinion—regardless of offensiveness—causes irreparable societal harm by impeding knowledge and moral progress. In On Liberty, he defends absolute freedom "on all subjects, practical or speculative, scientific, moral or theological", insisting censorship sacrifices "the entire moral courage of the human mind".

International human rights law codifies this Millian absolutism. Article 19 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights protects freedom of expression "regardless of frontiers" and "in the form of art". The UN Human Rights Committee declared that "blasphemy laws are incompatible with the Covenant, unless they qualify as incitement". The European Court of Human Rights similarly protects expression that "offends, shocks or disturbs", affirming that artistic freedom is "essential for democratic society". The Venice Commission is "essential for abolishing all blasphemy laws".

Yet critics questioned whether freedom of expression exists isolated from power dynamics. Some argued Hebdo's repeated depictions of Muslims as "threatening" amplified Islamophobia in France. Now this points to incitement. Still, the consensus remains robust: international law's three-part test for legitimate restrictions requires demonstrating necessity, proportionality and legitimate aims. Religious offence alone fails this threshold. The Rabat Plan, endorsed by the UN, recommends repealing blasphemy laws entirely. The Charlie Hebdo tragedy thus vindicated Mill's prediction: free societies must tolerate offensive speech rather than permit assassination to determine what may be published, affirming freedom of expression as an absolute democratic necessity.

Municipal Corporation officials remove encroachments at Rajguru market in Hisar.

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

HISAR, JANUARY 6

The Municipal Corporation of Hisar (MCH) launched the drive to remove encroachments from Rajguru Market and other nearby major markets in the town on Tuesday. The MC and the Building and Roads (B&R) Department jointly removed sheds installed outside shops on Railway Road and in front of the railway station.

An MC spokesperson said some traders had kept goods in the verandah at Rajguru Market which were removed. He said the action would continue until the situation became completely normal. He added that the drive was being carried out on the orders of Mayor Praveen Pipli and Municipal Commissioner Neemra.

The objective of the campaign was to ensure smooth movement in the markets and provide relief to the general public from inconvenience, the spokesperson said.

Pipli visited Patel Nagar where the work to repair and renovation of the railway under bridge (RUB) has started, to inspect the work. He said steps had been taken to resolve the problem of waterlogging at the Patel Nagar RUB. Earlier, officials of the Railways and the municipal corporation had jointly inspected the site and submitted a report, following which directions were issued to resolve the issue at the earliest.

Due to the rise in ground-water level, RUB frequently witnesses waterlogging. This had damaged the internal road. The renovation work of the damaged stretch was being carried out by the Railways.

NONIKA SINGH

Back in 1980s, Basu Chatterjee created a strong woman character, which not only ruled the public conscience but also became their voice. Today, one of Indian television's most powerful and iconic reel women, Rajni, lives again in a new form and avatar.

Karan Razdan, writer of the OG and writer-director of its 2.0 version, shares what made him revisit the memorable show. Even after four decades, Rajni refused to die in his memory, and its poor imitations over the years compelled him to recreate her in Rajni 2.0 through the character of her daughter, Guddu, which Anupam Kher dubbed as 'masterstroke'. The series is now airing on Doordarshan and its streaming platform Waves.

Razdan shares, "Back in 1985, Rajni had a free ride, for Doordarshan was the only channel. Today, there is a surfeit of platforms, hence the competition is stiff and it's a challenge to make your voice reach out amidst the noise." Add to it the fact that crime rules the roost and thrillers are go-to choice of most film-makers. So, what made him opt for a series with a huge social conscience? Well, Razdan does not go into preaching mode. He avers, "As makers, our first job is to entertain, may be inform and educate too." Interestingly, making of the series has been a learning experience for him too and while he understood many finer points of Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, legal terms like 'natural witness' came as a revelation. His lead heroine, enthusiastic and feisty Aradhana Sharma too has learnt a thing or two about RERA — Real Estate (Regulation and Development) Act — and India's landmark POSH (Prevention of Sexual Harassment) Act.

"Rajni is an emotion and a huge responsibility. To carry forward the legacy is not easy but I am truly enjoying the weight of the character etched in public memory by the irrepressible Priya Tendulkar," Aradhana says.

Aradhana relates to the indefatigable spirit of Rajni 2.0 and she is emerging stronger with each episode. As a woman she wants the show to deal with issues like marriage.

"Marriage is often perceived as the be-all and end-all of a woman's life. I want this notion to be challenged. Parents should not pressurise their daughters to tie the nuptial knot, just for the heck of it," she says.

Interestingly, Razdan has touched upon the same concern in the episodes on the dowry menace. Acutely aware as to how issues have changed in the last four decades, the writer in him is exploring current ones like digital fraud, VIP racism, chit-fund scam, property-related problems, et al.

He feels comparisons with the Basu Chatterjee's original are not fair. He says, "It's easier to cull out government bodies today. Back then, we were told to pack up after 48 episodes." So, what number is he aiming at today? He replies, "I can go on and on, as long as burning issues present themselves."

Here's a piece of advice from this 'voracious writer' to voracious viewers of today — "You will find the show very relatable since it deals with issues which concern a common man." His advice to women, his core audience is — "Be the change you want to see." For Aradhana, "Silence is not golden and one must raise one's voice especially against oppression."

'Singh ni darde...'

MONA

At New York City's mayoral inauguration, Babbulicious emerged as an unexpected yet powerful face of diversity — not through a speech or slogan, but the viral song — Gaddi Red Chalega — which is being played at one-year-old's birthday bash to girls, to songsters across the world, and now an official ceremony!

The Canada-based Punjabi artiste's performance reframed what celebration can look like in a city built by migrants, cultures and contradictions. Unapologetically honest, Babbulicious admitted he was nervous moments before stepping on the stage. But as he put it, "fired by the Mayor's speech and that 'Singh ni darde', he had the crowd moving, with Zohran Mamdani himself joining in singing, "New York Vich Munda Rehnda, Soniye Punjabi Aaye Aye."

Known for blending Punjabi rhythms with contemporary beats, his music reflects the lived experience of diaspora: rooted in heritage, but shaped by global cities and hybrid identities. When those sounds filled the inauguration space, they did more than entertain — signalling that the diversity is now being celebrated.

The moment resonated visually as well as musically. The singer in striding fuchsia turban, the newly sworn-in, the first Muslim and the first Millennial Mayor of New York, Zohran Mamdani moving to Punjabi beats alongside

Viral sensation Babbulicious, who performed at NYC's mayor Zohran Mamdani's swearing-in ceremony, talks about how he overcame nervousness to be part of the historic event

Bernie Sanders and supporters sent a clear message: Leadership does not have to distance itself from culture to be taken seriously. Instead, it can embrace it.

That image travelled quickly across social media, turning Babbulicious into a symbol of the ceremony's broader meaning. Reactions were mixed, and that contrast only sharpened the impact. Praise highlighted the joy and authenticity of the moment, while criticism revealed discomfort with seeing immigrant culture so visibly woven into political ceremony. Some on socials mistaking Babbulicious to be an Afghan. His response — "Love and peace to all!" In a city that speaks hundreds of languages, Babbulicious didn't need to represent everyone to represent something essential — that New York's identity is lived, dynamic and unapologetically plural.
